Black Country Museum - Half Term: Living Dangerously	Black Country Living Museum, Tipton Road, Dudley, DY1 4SQ	0121 557 9643	Saturday 15 - Sunday 23 February, 10am - 5pm Join us for a dangerously fun half term and explore the devastating disasters and downright bad luck that plagued Black Country workers of the past. Take on the role of journalist as you follow our family friendly trail, test your own toy rocket to its limits and meet a brand new host of historic characters guaranteed to make for an explosive day of misadventures for all ages. Before the age of health and safety, many a mishap befell the people of the Black Country – working during in the 19th century was downright dangerous! Meet the incorrigible union representative as he fights for workers’ rights after a mishap at the rolling mill. Can he convince the factory manager to change his ways, or are his workers doomed to unsafe working conditions? Piece together the calamities and debacles of the past as you put on your journalist hat and follow the treacherous trail from one disaster to the next. A boiler has exploded, the workers are ‘up in arms’ and someone has even lost a finger or two – can you come up with some eye-catching headlines and break the story to the public? Don’t forget to watch your step as you explore the shops and houses. Mis-shaped stairs, burns on the cooking range and even adulterated bread - the home was truly a dangerous place to live in the past!	0	99
